MACHINE KNITTING

Volume 3 . No. 6,
September 88
ISSN 0269-9761

Dear Readers

The September issue is always a difficult one to compile. It comes out in August - supposedly during the height of the summer, but we have to bring you the start of the autumn knitting! We've kept the yarns lightweight with only a hint of mohair! There are more designs for men this month with a very special design from Page Two in Jandis Brushed Bright Acrylic. It was designed exclusively for us and if you're not familiar with this lovely range of yarn, I do urge you to send away for a shade card and details of the super yarns available from the company. You'll find the address at the beginning of the pattern on page 40.

As regular readers will know, Ann Taylor joined the team a little while ago and is our resident 'expert' on Knitmaster machines. She's also as knowledgeable on Toyota machines, so we've decided to start a reader 'question and answer' service for all Toyota owners. Shelagh will continue to spur you on with her latest achievements in Talking Toyota and Ann will complement her articles with an additional column for your specific queries. If you've a problem or would like help with any aspect of Toyota knitting, just drop Ann a line and we'll include your letter in the magazine. (Don't forget, you can always mention if you'd prefer not to have your full name printed, but please include it - together with your full address when you write.) By the way, keep your Knitmaster letters rolling in, too - we look forward to hearing from all of you!

Ann

NEWS FROM BATSFORD

If, like our regular writer Shelagh Hollingworth, you go in for a little handspinning, Nina Shuttlewood's new book, Stylish Knitting could be just what you're looking for. Apart from 30 patterns ranging from glamorous evening knits to daytime designs, the book contains spinning and dyeing instructions, treadling and plying advice and spinning ratio charts. Non spinners can also use the patterns because instructions are given using commercially available yarns as well. The book costs £14.95.

Published last year, but fortunately still available, Shelagh Hollingworth's own book Knitting and Crochet for the Home contains patterns for a lovely collection of bedspreads, cushions, tableclothes and other items inspired by nineteenth century designs, price £12.95.

Both books are published by Batsford Craft Books.

STUDLEY STYLE

Steps into Summer is the title of Studley Wools Machine Knitting Book No 6. It contains patterns for eight tops and two skirts knitted in their Calico, Suki and Suki Smooth yarns on standard gauge machines. It's available from Studley stockists throughout the country.

BOND IN BLACK AND WHITE

As every one of the 16 original designs in Bond Knitting Systems' latest pattern book is knitted in either black, white or a combination of both - the title is, appropriately, Bond Knits in Black and White.

The yarns used range from DK weights, through Aran and chunky to mohair and, as some of the designs for women's garments are suitable for beginners and some for the more experienced knitter, there's something for everyone.

Priced at £2.96 the pattern book is available from department stores such as the John Lewis Partnership and the House of Fraser group and from independent wool shops nationally.

DATAKNIT

Machine knitters have been quick to catch on to the fact that computers are a good thing - and very useful. Clwyd Technics are educational computing specialists who produce Dataknit systems. They've sent us details of the system that links the BBC/Master Computer and Brother Knitting Machine models KH910 and KH 950.

The leaflet says that with Dataknit you can design freely on a painting program to produce the picture you want and Dataknit will work it out as a pattern of stitches which are sent to your machine. You can change your design on the computer screen as many times as you wish or allow the computer to produce original designs under your control. You can interrupt your knitting at any time and return to where you stopped or any other position or store all designs and instructions on disc for future use. It costs £249.

The same company produce other systems, including a version for the 200 stitch Knitmaster. All the systems are capable of using any other standard BBC software and carry a 12 month warranty.

Dataknit is available from Clwyd Technics, Antelope Industrial Estate, Rhydymwyn, Nr Mold, Clwyd CH7 5JH (tel: 0352 741751). Woolengiers at Lord Street, Wrexham (tel: 0978 266260) and Pepper Row, Chester (tel: 0244 45868).

DESIGN BOARD

Top marks for initiative to Vivien Pain. As a teacher of machine knitwear design she felt there was a definite need for an aid to designing, other than the paper charts already on the market which she finds large and difficult to file. She was unable to find such an aid so set about designing a product that, as a designer, she would like to use herself and which would help when teaching design to others.

The result is the Machine Knitter's Design Board which is a re-usable chart for designing knitwear and punchcards for patterning. It's a solid board made of high-impact polystyrene, printed with stitch proportioned rectangles, with a total of 200 stitches by 320 rows, clearly marked. One part of the board has 24 stitches and 60 rows sectioned off for designing punchcards. The whole surface is wipe clean so any mistakes can be wiped off easily and, when the design's complete, it can be transferred to the comprehensive record sheets provided (A4 size) to be filed for future reference. The board can then be wiped clean ready for the next design.

The kits come complete with the board, two water-soluble pens, full instructions and a set of record sheets - all in a sturdy heavy-duty polythene carrier bag. The price is £14.95 plus £1.95 post and packing and is available from The Machine Knitter's Company, P.O. Box 10, Cowbridge, South Glamorgan CF7 7YY.

CRAFT WORKBOOKS

Many craft books either give you inspirational ideas, but no instruction, or else they're all instruction and rather low on ideas. A new series of books from Batsford are virtually courses which take you through the techniques in a logical way at the same time as you are actually making something. The Embroiderer's Workbook is by Jan Messent, The Weaver's Workbook by well-known weaver and designer Hilary Chetwynd and The Torchon Lace Workbook's author is teacher and designer Bridget Cook.

All three hardback books are in full colour throughout and cost £9.95 each.

NEW YARNS, NEW DESIGNS

Regency is a silk and mohair mixture chunky yarn available in 20 colours and Cotton Candy, a slub cotton mixture which comes in 10 shades. Both have been recently introduced by Longwood Textiles (Mohair Direct) and are available by mail order.

Both books have an added bonus, the instructions are given for both chunky machine and hand knitting. Each book costs £3.95 (p & p inc).

SCOTTISH KNITTING FAYRE

We're all beavering away at MKM to make the 2nd Scottish Knitting Fayre even better than last year. So, too, are the Edinburgh Knitting and Crochet Guild – Isabella Ricketts says all the members have their needles and hooks working overtime to produce new, exciting and interesting work for display on their stand at the Royal Highland Show Ground, Ingliston, Edinburgh from October 6th to 9th.

If you're not a member of the Guild, but are interested in hearing more about their activities, Isabella would be very pleased to give you all the information. Write to her at 3 Gillsland Road, Edinburgh EH10 5BW, enclosing a sae.

THE ART OF MOTIF KNITTING AND 24 STITCH DESIGN By Kathleen Kinder

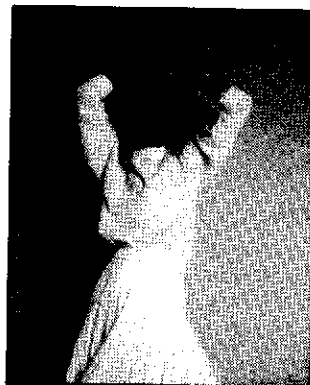

This book is the first to appear which deals with motif knitting and its design as an art form. Kathleen Kinder lays down the principles which are her guidelines. She counters the view of a leading handknitter that the machine puts colour to sleep. She gives sixteen ways to use colour imaginatively, and which are effective "breaklines" in situations where colour changes could create a "dead line". There are over 90 original patterns, 11 of which are in colour, the rest accompanied by quality black and white photographs. Many of these patterns are illustrations of points made in the text. There is help on how to design motifs for sideways and diagonal as well as for conventional knitting.

Perhaps the most interesting information concerns the translation of virtually any size of suitable picture to a 24 st repeat or indeed to any repeat of one's choice. Kathleen Kinder hopes that this new approach will considerably widen the scope of the motif designer.

The book, which is for all standard punchcard and electronic machines, costs £6.95 plus £1.00 p & p. Available at the end of August from Kathleen Kinder, Valley View, Station Road, Giggleswick, Settle, N. Yorkshire BD24 0AB. (Tel: 07292 2444.)

READ ALL ABOUT IT

I am continually amazed at the amount of information available to the machine knitter these days. For about twelve years now it has just flowed and flowed, and may it please continue. Over the years computer technology has advanced so much, and it is delightful that this had been incorporated into our knitting world.

From Terry Mason, a Chartered Textile Technologist in Northern Ireland, comes news of further computer programs. He already has several on the market, and his latest is called Skirts Volume 1 which he says will deal with a variety of 'downward knits'. The knitter has a choice of styles which can be knitted to standard sizes with length adjustment according to fashion or modesty (I like that bit!) or to one's own measurements which can be in inches or centimetres. Everything is displayed on the screen, or if a printer is available a print out may be obtained merely by pressing a key.

The print outs sent were certainly very comprehensive and I would think those owners of computers would have a ball. (I keep saying like mad for one – BUT – why does everything else have to be replaced first?) If you feel this is for you, write to Terry Mason, 15 Inishmoyne Green, Antrim, N. Ireland.

If you live near Harlow College in Essex, more one day Saturday workshops are planned for September. The cost will be about £9.00 per six hour day and you take your machine along with you. Classes will also be available on week days and evenings, so do make enquiries before the new term in September.

New from Knitmaster for the Zippy 90 comes an intarsia carriage. This technique is becoming very popular now, so do ask for a demonstration at your nearest stockist.

If you are already into intarsia and have not seen Dawson's Grid, then you are really missing out. Thelma Dawson produces the most intricate intarsia designs and you can, too, with the aid of this grid. By taping two grids together, one can produce a picture of 138 stitches and 180 rows – approximately 18 inches wide and 21 inches long – in four ply. The photographic example Thelma sent was really amazing. Try your nearest stockist or send direct to 287 Brompton Road, London SW3 2DY.

I have not yet seen the new Knitmaster DesignMaster Electronic machine, but I hope to before too long. This machine can knit non-repeating stitch patterns up to 200 stitches wide and 1,000 rows long, whatever the stitch pattern you decide to use. Together with the design controller, which takes your drawn card and memorises the design, it is then ready to knit. It will store the pattern for up to seven days, even when turned off. Memory cards will be available with a design and will retain the pattern for five years, so one can build up a library.

Who says technology for knitters has not advanced!

To come back to earth for a while, may I continue with some more Golden oldies! Remember, despite such advanced technology, one still has to learn to knit. For those new to this machine knitting disease, here are some true and trusted friends to help you on your way.

From the Knitting Neuk, 32 Ashley Road, Aberdeen come some American publications. In particular I have liked the Knitting with Tami series Nos. 3 to 8. Around £4.50 for a booklet of designs, I have found them very good and with such ideas as blankets and tablecloths – very useful for Christmas knitting.

Another is Mary Louise Norman's Wet, Warm and Wonderful – what a title! – For half scale charters this is a complete collection for a baby's layette right down to mitts. Please do note, it's no good if you have no charter and costs £10.95 from the above address.

If you really want to spoil yourselves, then send for Susanna Lewis and Julia Weissman's Machine Knitters Guide to Creating Fabric. At £23.00, it is worth every penny. Anyone who has attended any of Susanna's lectures will know what a gifted lady she is. I had the pleasure of chatting to Susanna in Aberdeen last year, but it was a friend of hers who really summed up Susanna's approach to knitting. She said "wherever we go, Susanna interprets everything into her knitting". That you can share this talent from her book is indeed fantastic.

Back again to new items to look out for.

I am a garter stitch carriage fan and I use Aran yarn at about T10 with great success, so I was delighted to learn from King Cole of a new yarn, Aran Moby Dick. It's 85% Acrylic, 15% luxury Lambswool and costs around £4.95 a 400g cone. It is machine washable, will be available in natural, red, navy and sage and is very suitable for chunky machines, too. My only wish is that the yarns were on 500g cones. I find that about 1,000g makes a reasonable size sweater. Like all knitters I get many oddments left and although they can be used eventually, they do tend to sit about for a while!

Many of you will have visited

Swiftknitters' Showtime at Portsmouth, but some may not know of the quarterly magazine Swiftknitter's Circular, they produce. At £5.50 per year, starting February 1988, this magazine contains many articles plus designs by Jo Beedles, Anne Durkan, Mary Dowse and Annie (Posh Frocks) Brown. It's a good one for the Club Library or – if you are like me – another one for your reference library. Send to Swiftknitters, 131-133 Fratton Road, Portsmouth, Hants.

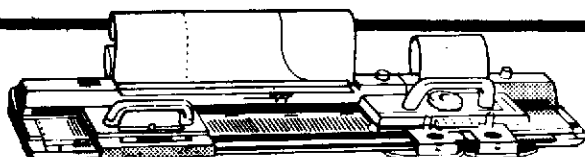

Finally from Dianne Bennett, 78 Tudor Drive, Yately, Camberley, Surrey GU17 7DF, another of her informative books, this time on charting devices. There is very little available about charters, so this should be a very helpful acquisition. At £5.25 it covers everything from setting up the charter, drafting and adapting blocks and seven sample garments. The information covers Knitmaster, Jones+Brother, Toyota and Passap/Pfaff charters. It's a much needed publication. If you have never got round to using your charter, now there should be no more excuses!

More goodies next month.

TALKING POINT

SALESMANSHIP AND THE ART OF MACHINE KNITTING

At first glance these two ideas do not sound as though they could possibly go together, but the time comes to most of us when we have more time to spare and possibly more yarn to spare than we know what to do with.

Machine knitting is quick and efficient, so with the best will in the world we can find that we have provided all the family with enough garments to last them a long time and the machine is beginning to sit there unused.

If you are an addict, you may even begin to make things with no particular person in mind, hoping that someone will want it when it's made. However, that isn't really a good idea and certainly not as inspiring as making things to order.

CONSIDERING OUTLETS

This will take some time, thought and plenty of paper, since you will need to write down everything that you think of and then go through the lists working on the process of elimination, because what you are left with, when you have done all this preliminary work, may well be a method of selling your work that suits you admirably.

Perhaps the most important thing on your list should be, what do you like to make? You won't be very happy to take on making sweaters for the local male voice choir, for example, if you get bored with continuous, unshaped stocking stitch – and they only wear polo neck sweaters! If you like to make baby things, put that down. If you like to work on the ribber, put that down. Possibly you could head that section with likes and dislikes and list all your thoughts on the subject accordingly.

If you are interested in womens' fashions, put that down on the list but add which angle you especially enjoy. Do you especially like quick and easy designs that can be sold relatively cheaply on the "small profits, quick returns" system, or do you like something special that takes longer but will bring greater reward? This aspect will have a bearing on how to decide to sell your knitting.

Are you housebound? This might apply to young mothers as well as older people who cannot get about. This won't necessarily hold you back. There are outlets for most people's work these days – if in no other way, there are nearly always people advertising for knitters to work for them and they frequently deliver and collect for their outworkers.

Having decided what you would like to make, you must then think about the best place to sell. This need not be selling in the generally accepted sense of the word, which implies that you will need to take a stand at a show or a market, but it goes without saying that these are two excellent methods – although perhaps a bit advanced for what you have in mind, that might come along later.

SELLING YOURSELF

After making things for your family, no doubt you'll find your first orders will roll in with no effort of your own. People like what they see and ask if you will knit one for them. Some of these garments, especially sweaters, will be easy to make and you'll be able to turn them out very quickly. You may even be able to make them for the whole family for Christmas, almost with your eyes shut! If it's that simple, why not invest in some extra yarn? You might be able to get a reduction by buying in bulk and make a pile of the sweaters to store ready for a selling debut.

How about a party? If you have plenty of friends and occasionally get invited to a party-plan evening, what better opportunity could you need? Make a few little invitations in advance and invite the whole group back to your place one evening for tea and goodies and a review of your latest efforts. Make sure that you have the pile of easy-makes to hand (some people like to buy there and then, rather than placing an order), but also have quite a selection of garments that can be used as samples from which to take orders.

If at all possible, have a friend to help you. Not only do you need someone to take down orders, you'll need someone to do a bit of measuring. Don't forget to explain that some garments are meant to be oversized so that your customers won't be too alarmed when you tell them that their size will be 102 cm all round when they know they measure 86 cm! What's more, some ladies feel embarrassed at having to sell to friends, especially at the going rate and it's important not to under-sell yourself. If you overhear remarks like "I could knit it cheaper myself" you must resist the opportunity to say "then do so" and it would no doubt help you and your guests to feel more comfortable if you keep out of the practical side of things. For those fortunate enough to be knitting simply for the love of it and not needing the money, do try to avoid selling things simply at cost of materials, except maybe to the family. It makes things more difficult for those who have to make their living from their machines and for some reason, it would appear that items so easily obtained are seldom really appreciated. Perhaps it might seem that you make the articles so easily that they aren't worth bothering about or, worse still, that there might be something wrong with them. Ask a reasonable price and people will feel that they are getting value for money. As for how much to charge, you must get this worked out well in advance and make sure that the samples are clearly marked and that your helpers know what your prices are so that they are not constantly asking you. You might also like to have a list of any extras you feel you must charge for.

Working out prices is always a difficult point and depends on the area and how much the traffic will bear. If you find nobody has ordered or bought, you should assume that you have priced yourself out of that particular market. This is unlikely to happen though, if the party starts amongst your own set of friends. You will probably know the sort of prices they consider good value. If the party system snowballs, each hostess may be able to provide you with a rough idea of her set of guests. This helps also when deciding the type of samples to take along. Where a selection of sophisticated sweaters suits one party, it might be childrens' wear at another.

SELLING THE FAMILY

Whilst the members of your family might not like to think of themselves as clothes horses, they will certainly be advertising your knitwear at the start of your career and this will no doubt be a good send-off for you. If you enjoy making childrens' things, you will possibly start receiving orders quite soon if you make things that all the children in class want to be seen in. If you can think of something slightly different to do to a sweater or use an attractive yarn, all the children will want one and you'll be in business!

This type of selling usually starts off at the school gate as the word spreads but, if you are prepared to put plenty into it, you will be able to take advantage of other occasions to let your work be shown. Mothers with small children are frequently invited to group meetings, toddler groups and so on. If you can take some of your samples with you, you will be creating a wider market catchment. There are other groups for children too; they have the r clubs and Brownies and Cubs etc. If your child is wearing a smart sweater with the uniform, you might just land yourself an order for the whole group. That's why it is so useful to try to make something special for the child. If you are able, for example, to make the club sweater with, say, the emblem as a motif on the front, you could bring in lots of orders.

This idea goes for older members of the family too. If the club emblem is too wide to be punchcard designed and you do not have the benefit of an electronic machine, then you might find it easiest to rush through a basic sweater in next to no time, leaving a swiss darning job for the emblem or club name to be worked in peace in the evenings. Once your family member has shown off his or her original, it won't be long before everybody wants one! That's fine for garments where we all like to be the same – but if you make a fashion garment that all the neighbours fall in love with, you'll want to keep it exclusive so that you'll still have customers flocking to your door for originals.

Either way, if you kit out your family in lovely hand-knitteds made on your machine, that will be your passport to selling your garments in the first place.

WHAT TO SELL

We have already seen how selling snowballs with articles that the family and friends wear, but if you need to make money regularly, you may want to make a wide variety of samples.

You will have to think of something that you can make easily, that is popular, not too expensive and if possible, fills a gap in the market. This is not as difficult as it sounds – go out and about and look at what people are wearing and buying. If leg warmers are all the rage, forget them. If snoods are in, forget those too. Why? If they are very fashionable that means that someone is mass producing them cheaply and they will be flooding the market before you can get your stock knitted. No, the right attitude is to ask yourself – if they are buying leg warmers and snoods today, what will they be wearing next week? It's simple really, leg warmers and snoods are for cold weather and you should be thinking about three to six months ahead, when something else will be all the rage. Watch the fashion programmes on TV, try to see the advanced fashion magazines and learn what is catching on.

Making articles easily doesn't necessarily mean that you'll be making things that are cheap and cheerful. You might have an easy to work garment that looks great in a rather special yarn, say mohair or silk. That way you save on the time it takes to make the item, but you'll have to charge a reasonable price for the yarn used. Your finished article can still be a good pot-boiler because you can turn them out quickly.

Don't think in terms of stocking stitch all the time. Consider becoming proficient at working in lace patterns or a special style of tuck pattern. Once you become very fast, you will not need to charge so highly to cover your working time. You will be able to produce the garments in the time that another person might take to work a similar garment in stocking stitch.

If you have time in hand between orders, take advantage and use up some left-overs to make accessories. If you can add scarves, shawls, gloves and berets or other hats to some of your samples, you may find them snapped up more rapidly. It can save the buyer having to match up the items in a shop. They will not always want the accessories in the same colour, so try making more than one set in the same yarn quality. Any left-over sets will no doubt sell at Christmas.

All this is to do with selling in quite a small way. Selling both yourself and your wares in a big way had better wait until next month, if you want to make a wider career of it. That subject deserves a chapter to itself!

DUOMATIC UPDATE

ONE CARD FOR MANY TUCK PATTERNS

The pattern for the Duomatic sweater in this month's Machine Knitting Monthly is given with instructions for knitting tuck stitch over all the working needles on the front bed by manual manipulation of the N-X lever on the front lock. When the setting is at AX, every needle on the front bed collects a loop of yarn on each row. Then, when the lever is moved to N, all the front bed stitches and the loops, are knitted off. This method of obtaining the stitch pattern is fine if you are knitting a one-off garment in this stitch. If you would like to knit the stitch more than once then it would probably be worth punching a card and using the Deco. I have punched a small piece of card [1] just to show you how this card would need to be punched.

The needle setting would be as follows:-

TALKING TOYOTA

At what stage do you tell yourself that you are no longer a novice but a fully-fledged machine knitter? I recall being invited to talk to a reader once, at an exhibition. "Oh, but you are the experts", she said. As you must know if you read my adventures regularly, this was a big laugh. It took me quite a while to explain to this lady that I was little more than a beginner and might be able to help her simply because all my sticky problems were so recent!

I suppose you pass from the elementary class when you realise that you can not only settle down to begin a garment by casting on, in any number of ways, without having to refer to "the book". You can also thumb through a book of knitting patterns and visualise every movement without it all seeming so much gobbledegook.

BUILDING UP CONFIDENCE

Looking back, it's hard to define when I found myself working at the machine as though I was driving it instead of it driving me. It isn't so difficult to recall how I used to feel when I approached each working session at the needlebed. I cannot think why, but I used to be physically nervous of it and admit that had I not been really determined to master it, I might have given up once or twice. I was seldom a person to admit defeat and that must have helped.

For all lovers of hand knitting who cannot make the change to machine knitting, here is my reason for the problem. Hand knitting takes longer to complete, but if you make a mistake it's just a case of whipping it off the needles, unravelling the work, picking up the stitches and starting again. When it came to the machine, I had to re-learn how to cast on stitches (this action alone took me longer than casting on hand knitting stitches the first few times). Having achieved that, I was terribly afraid that I would do something wrong which would involve me in having to start all over again. No wonder people give up before they've hardly started! I did have memories of old machines where ghastly things could happen, like the knitting dropping into your lap or the carriage jamming almost irretrievably.

To be honest, it was necessary for me to learn to use the Toyota K 858 without any outside help and that might have held me up. However, after a few separate "goes" with the single bed, I found I could cast on quickly and that was the first step. Once I had mastered that, it was quicker than casting on with a pair of needles. Without a shadow of doubt, the knitting was going to be faster. If only it could have stopped there! Every little section had to be learned minutely – and I was still terrified of it going wrong. Although the first samples – just squares and shapings – went perfectly, they took forever to make.

Learning something new always takes time, not simply for the initial learning, but the practise, too. Once I could manage the basic skills, I began by making a few childrens' things. It would have been easier to follow my own patterns but to make sure that I could understand commercial patterns, I used those. My goodness, was I ever slow? You know the feeling, when you mutter to yourself "I could knit this quicker by hand!". You can become quite proficient while working at those small models. After all, shaping a round neck is no different in a size 66 cm than a size 86 cm and that is a very useful accomplishment.

So, before you give up on machine knitting because you think you can knit it quicker by hand, use me as an example. There is the preliminary time whilst starting machine knitting when you know (or tell yourself) that you could do it faster by hand, but suddenly you're over that boundary and you realise that you are as quick on the machine. Soon you can say you'll never be able to do things as fast by hand.

YOU, THE EXPERT . . .

"Who me?", I hear you ask. With our modern machines and their well written manuals we have no need to be afraid of the needlebeds. There is so little to go wrong. Once you feel like that, provided you don't get over-confident, then very little will. Has the carriage jammed? Just refer to your instruction Manual and you'll find you simply press the release lever and the carriage will come away without it being a major disaster. The first time I had to do that I wondered what sort of mess I would find underneath. To my surprise, all I found was the needles in the layout for the movement I was making. I only had to reset them using a single transfer tool. Since that time, I have become quite an expert in carriage jamming and releasing. As you see, it's the fear of the unknown that puts me off things and nothing is ever as bad as I think it could be.

All this trepidation occurred while I was still working in stocking stitch. The fanciest thing I had coped with was stripes – and I felt sure I was missing out on some technicality when I couldn't find a magic way to make the colours change without having to remove one colour from its feeder and insert the other. Could I really have sat the first time, with the yarn from the feeder tucked firmly over my shoulder and held out of the way by my elbow? Although I managed to avoid a bad back, the stress was tremendous! Before long, I found that I could just place it on the end of the table and it stayed there until I needed it again.

Progress came in fits and starts, but there's no denying, once you have acquired a new skill, it's worthwhile using it more than once to fix it in your mind. The obvious example is casting on. Each time you try out a new pattern or action on the machine, you need to cast on the stitches. That, for me, was how I realised that I was becoming expert, in that particular skill.

EVEN THE LEARNED GO ON LEARNING

All the time this was going on, I was wondering about all those pink buttons, let alone the punch cards. I would have to get down to learning all about patterning and I was highly nervous again. I don't suppose I'm the only un-technical body in the world. Indeed to my friends I have been known to say that I'm so totally unmechanical that even when I have to switch on the electric kettle I need a box of chocolates to get over the stress!

I clutched the manual in my hot little hand and set aside a couple of hours to try to understand the method. Now the K 858, for those of you who have other models, is operated in a partly mechanical way. The cards will find the correct patterns for you but you have to pull a selecting lever at the left to make the needles come out to take up the yarn in the second feeder. It must sound strange if you haven't seen it in operation but it's very easy and also helps the knitter to understand what is going on in the machine. Were I to change to a more automatic machine now, I would perhaps be pleased that the machine was doing that movement automatically, but I would totally understand how it all works and that, I think, is a great advantage.

Having learned how the patterns were formed, I tried everything, from Fair Isle to weaving. I then discovered that I could invent patterns of my own with the little pink knobs without needing to use the punchcards. The designer in me now came to the fore. I was only learning how to use all these extras so the usual trepidation didn't enter into things. This was just having fun and making a long strip of patterns.

However, it wasn't long before I needed to make up some swatches of the patterns, those supplied plus some original ideas. Casting on was very rapid by now, but casting off was still a long and laborious process. I had fallen into the category of never casting off if I could help it but running things on to waste yarn and removing the knitting from the needles. Nevertheless, I wasn't happy with that method, especially for shoulders. Grafting is all very well and I'm pretty nimble at it, but it doesn't always give enough strength to a garment. For these swatches, I thought the quickest method would be to cast on once, do each pattern and run a few rows of waste yarn between each section, sorting out a way to separate them at the end. That was my downfall. After preparing the samples without difficulty, I had to pull the waste yarn between each sample until a row of loops was exposed. With suitable needles, I then had to pick up the row of loops and cast off the stitches by hand – not just once, but many times twice because two rows of loops became exposed – all because I was still under the impression I could cast off stitches quicker by hand. It was a bit of a nightmare. If I had only realised that, I could have used the opportunity to get in a lot of practise at casting off on the machine. Actually it didn't do the samples any favours either. They looked rather "gathered" at the top and bottom. Of course, I wouldn't do that now. Why not? Well, I've graduated now. I can not only cast on expertly but I'm a dab hand at casting off too! In some places I find it necessary to cast off by wrapping the yarn round the needle and taking the loop off with the transfer tool, placing it on to the adjacent needle and repeating that process. Whenever possible, I prefer to use the latchet tool to lift off a row of large loops – it's sometimes called the 'crochet' method. I taught myself how to do it from the manual because Brenda along the lane said it gave a good finish. She added that she actually uses a crochet hook and not the latchet tool. I wish you could have seen my first efforts as tongue between teeth I bent over, inserted the latch tool and caught the first stitch, drew it slowly off the needle, equally slowly pushed the tool through the second stitch – making sure that the first stitch stayed behind the open latch – snapped up the second stitch and with bated breath drew it through the first loop. Hey presto, the latch closed over and the second stitch came through! Then I carefully, with a deliberate movement, pressed the tool further so that this second stitch would move up behind the latch. This was the style for each subsequent stitch. It took me ages, but it worked and it looked good. Need I say that I could have done it with a pair of knitting needles in a third of the time?

No matter, at last I knew how to do it and hopefully, I would get quicker in time. I went on persevering and it did become faster, but I was still following those deliberate movements because I feared that I would drop stitches if I didn't take all that care. At a recent show, I passed a stand where a visitor was having a method of casting off demonstrated to her and it looked considerably easier than my way of doing it. Well, it hadn't occurred to me that it would be a whole lot easier if I first brought the needles out to holding position. I couldn't wait to put that into practice, and the next time I needed to cast off stitches I improved my running time by almost half, just by having the needles in holding position.

Thus came the great day when I could say "Now I can not only knit faster on the K 858 than I can by hand, but I can also cast on and cast off quicker than I can by hand". How did I achieve this? One day I decided to try casting off with the use of a crochet hook instead of the latch tool. The method is just the same but using a crochet hook cuts out at least two movements for me, there is no pushing the stitch to make sure that it's behind the latch before and after picking up stitches. I keep the needles in holding position as previously, but I insert the crochet hook through and secure the first stitch then draw it off the needle. I insert the hook into the next stitch and as I draw the second loop through the first, I draw that one off the needle all in one movement. If you are able to crochet, that makes it easier as it's just like slip stitch, but even if you can't, it's still worth trying. After all, no doubt there was a time when you couldn't machine knit – treat the crochet hook as another little hand held tool!

What my transfer from hand to machine knitting came down to was overcoming my fear of something mechanical long enough to be able to make it work as fast – and then faster than hand knitting. I still have hand knitting and crochet to do and would not dream of comparing the two. There is room in my world for every aspect of the knitting craft and I feel certain pride in anything I have made – whether it takes a pair or a bed of knitting needles!

THE GARTER BAR

Several readers have written to us recently saying that they have bought garter bars which have the instructions only in Japanese! Since we don't have space in the magazine for a crash course in Japanese, this month's article describes the use of the garter bar.

One of the knitters who attends my classes recently brought in an old knitting machine which she had bought at a jumble sale, which knitted the row by pulling the stitches up and over the loops of the previous row. This could be done to either produce knit stitches or purl stitches, so it was possible to knit garter stitch on it. Perhaps some of our readers may have had one of these machines? Modern knitting machines do not have this facility, but it is still possible to knit garter stitch using the garter bar.

The garter bar is divided into three pieces, two of which are the width of 100 stitches, which can be joined together, and a shorter section which can be added to one of the longer pieces. By using and combining the sections, it is possible to remove different numbers of stitches from the machine without having long sections of bar which are unused. There are also two stopper bars in the box, which hold the needles firmly in position when removing and replacing stitches. Garter bars can be used not only on standard gauge machines but also on most chunky machines. The needle spacing of standard machines is 4.5mm, while on most chunky machines it is 9mm, so alternate eyes of the garter bar can be used.

Although the garter bar is really designed for removing stitches from the machine and replacing them the other way round, it is also very useful to have the garter bar as a large stitch holder. When knitting a slash neck, for example, the stitches of the body section can be removed from the machine using the garter bar. The rib can then be knitted and all stitches transferred to the main bed, then the stitches from the body can be replaced before knitting one joining row and casting off the stitches. The pieces of the garter bar can also be used to remove shoulder and neck stitches, so that they do not have to be run off on waste yarn and then picked up again. When knitting a sideways knitted jumper without a seam down the centre of the sleeve, stitches can be removed from the machine and replaced in a different position. Using the garter bar in this way can save a lot of time.

Turning the knitting using the garter bar needs to be practiced on a small piece of knitting before attempting this on a garment. The first few times that I tried to turn the stitches, I ended up with the garter bar on the needles behind the knitting that I had turned, and the only way to get it off was to take the knitting off the machine! Before attempting to turn the knitting, bring all the needles forward and place the stopper bar(s) on the needle bed. These keep the needles the correct distance apart (even if they are bent!) and should hold them firmly. The distance between the back and front of the stopper bar can be adjusted to fit the machine that it is used on. If necessary, loosen the screws on the top of the stopper bar. Place the bar on the bed, putting the straight edge of the bar behind the needle butts and pushing the serrated edge between the needles. Push the back and front of the bar firmly together and tighten the screws.

Removing the stitches from the machine on to the garter bar is fairly easy. Look at the garter bar - below the holes in the eyes there are grooves on one side and a raised section on the other side. Select the bar of the correct length and hold it with the grooves at the top. (It may be helpful to mark this side of the bar with a sticker for future reference.) Bring all the needles to holding position and put the stopper bar in position. Put the garter bar over the heads of the needles and pull the knitting forward on to it. Pull the knitting fairly firmly, so that the stitches are pulled right down to the bottom of the slot on the garter bar. A wider section in the slot helps to prevent the stitches pulling off again.

Next comes the more difficult part of the operation - returning the stitches to the needles. Turn the garter bar over. Make sure that the latches of the needles are all fully open. Place the garter bar on top of the needles with the stitches behind the needle heads and press down slightly. Gradually pull the bar towards you until you feel the stitches catch in the heads of the needles. Now, all that remains is to remove the garter bar from the bed. Pull the bar, turning it first at right angles to the needles and then pulling it diagonally backwards until it comes away from the machine - this is the part of the operation which needs some practice. If some stitches have dropped while turning the knitting, this probably means that you were not pushing down on the bar all the way along while pulling the stitches into the needle heads.

Turning one row of knitting does take time, so considerable patience would be needed to knit a garment in garter stitch. However, a garter stitch hem can be knitted fairly easily and it is also possible to knit one purl row into the middle of a single bed hem to give it a crisp fold (see Fig. 1). Knit the row before the turning row at main tension, so that the knitting can be removed from the machine easily. Turning the knitting every few rows makes an interesting pleated effect (see Fig. 2). This can be used for capes, skirts and even bedjackets. The sections can be shaped using holding position to knit a circular skirt. Patterns can be made using one purl row, turning the work each side of this row. Try knitting one purl row every 30 rows on a plain garment.

It is also possible to use the garter bar in other ways. When knitting a row which has decreases across it at intervals, the garter bar can be used to move the stitches across and reduce the width of the row. It is also possible to transfer alternate needles, for example when knitting a picot hem. Bring the needles forward to upper working position using the straight edge of the garter bar. Bring alternate needles forward to holding position, which moves the stitches on them behind the latches. Bring the remaining needles forward to holding position, moving them carefully so that each stitch remains in the needle hook. Put the garter bar in position and pull on to it the stitches which are in the latches. The stitches held in the needle heads will not slide on to the garter bar. Move the garter bar across to the next needle and replace the stitches so that there are two stitches on each needle.

Some garter bars have a small bar with a foam back and some plastic pegs in the box with the other items. These can be used for 'vertical weaving'. Weaving yarns are threaded through the eyes of the garter bar and they can be placed over selected needles in one operation. Owners of garter bars without these extra pieces can use a ruler with foam, such as draught excluder, stuck on to one side and two plastic pegs. To try a simple example of this type of design, cast on 20 stitches each side of 0 and knit a few rows. Use the small section of the garter bar, and thread into seven alternate eyes in the centre of it strands of fairly thick yarn. Use two different colours and alternate the colours. Knot the short end of the strands and tie them to a clamp. Bring forward seven alternate needles in the centre of the block of 40 stitches which were cast on. Put the strands of yarn over these needles. Let the garter bar hang down in front of the knitting. Place the bar over the threads of yarn, with the foam against the yarn, and clip it in place with the pegs. Knit two rows, then select the same needles again. Move the garter bar up and over the needles, putting the threads over them in one operation. Repeat, weaving the yarns over the needles every two rows. Pull the garter bar fairly sharply downwards when extra yarn is needed. For a complete garment, allow long strands of yarn to complete the design. The design can be altered by moving the garter bar to bring the yarn over the needles from left to right and then from right to left (see Fig. 3). Try also alternating the needles over which the yarn is laid, or moving the block of needles across to form a zig-zag. For a firmer fabric, thread lengths of yarn into every eye of the garter bar. The design can be used either on part of the width of a garment or all over it.

I hope that this article has given readers without a garter bar some ideas about what they can be used for. Those readers who have a garter bar with instructions only in Japanese should refer to the diagrams in the instruction leaflet when reading the article.

RIS BISHOP SPECIAL

As a complete contrast to my 'sports' motifs in recent issues, I have designed two all-over Fair-Isle designs this month which are classic-style patterns, suitable for ladies and menswear. The idea of combining cables and lace has been a very popular theme in knitwear this season, but obviously on domestic machines this involves a lot of hand work. I have therefore designed Fair-Isle representations of this idea which I hope will be useful.

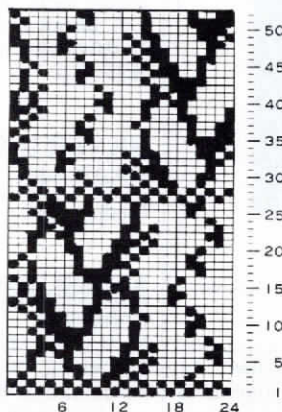

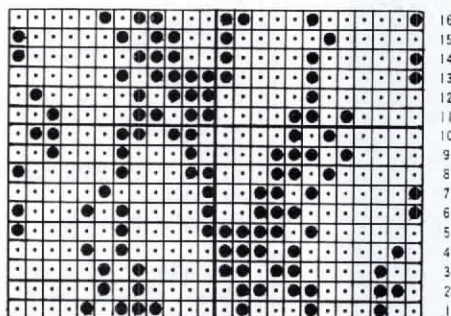

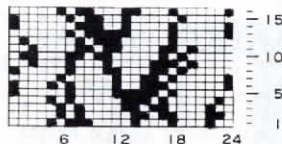

Yarns, colours etc.

These designs are very effective either in neutral colours like white and grey, which gives a subtle, textured look, or in bolder colours for a more dramatic effect. Put the colour you want for the main background into feeder 1 and the contrast colour into feeder 2.

DESIGN A

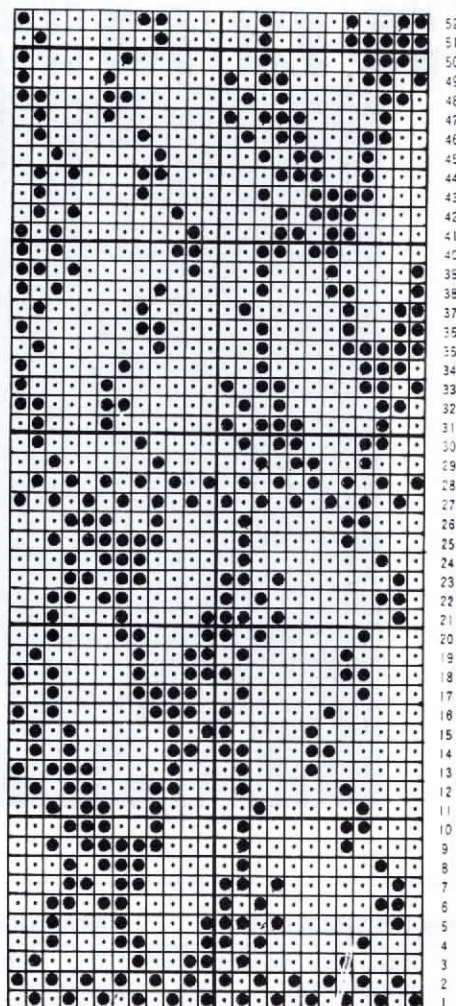

Punchcard – repeat the 16 rows of pattern twice more so that the card is long enough to clip together.

DESIGN B

All machines – to add more colour to this design, use a bright colour in feeder 1 (instead of the background colour) on rows 1-2 and 27-28 only.

Electronic machines – to position designs in centre of garment as illustrated, set N1 cam (needle 1 position) between needles 12-13 to right or left of centre.

FAIR-ISLE BOOK *£2.95

More than 20 designs illustrated in colour (and black and white) PLUS a basic sweater pattern for all ages from babies to teenagers – for 24 st punchcard and electronic machines.

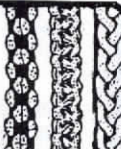

FABRIC DYE PASTELS *£3.50

A fascinating way to add more colour to your knitting. With the box of 15 colours comes 6 fabric designs (illustrated in colour), garment pattern and full instructions – for 24, 30 and 40 stitch machines.

Set 3 – Animals – sheep, zebras, cat, kitten and puppy. (24 and 40 stitch) *£1.50

Set 6 – Braids, edgings and collars – 21 decorative techniques for single bed machines. *£1.50

Set 5 – Lace fabrics – 6 unusual designs for machines with a lace carriage (24 st) *£1.50

Set 7 – Fair-isle (adult) – 7 designs with short 'floats' and colour ideas. (24 stitch) *£2.00

An illustrated list of these and other designs for electronic and Passap/Pfaff machines is available. Prices include P&P.

THE BORDERS and YOKES COLLECTION

Over 30 original designs illustrated in colour PLUS – a simplified method of knitting circular yokes (including garment pattern) – for 24 stitch punchcard and electronic machines – *£3.95
